Utah Fireproofing Company is Ordered by Public Works Board to Continue.

CITY ENGINEER ACCUSED AGAIN CHARGED WITH DELIBERATELY HAMPERING COMPANY.

The Utah Fireproofing company, which had the contract for sidewalk extensions, has called off its men and suspended work on all the sidewalks now in course of construction.

The company sent another communication to the board similar to that of last week. In this, as in the former, it blames the city engineer for any delay and states that under such conditions as exist it is impossible to carry on the work.

Charges Against City Engineer. These grievances consist for the most part of complaints against the city engineer's office, which the company claims has hampered it in the work in every possible manner.

False Statements Alleged. The company's communications state that if the work was continued at the rate in which the city is furnishing stock it would take five years to complete.

GOLD IS FOUND BY POLICE

"The Biter Bitten, or The Worm That Turned," would have been a fitting name for a comedy that was enacted in the police station last night.

G. W. Kellogg, a brakeman, who said that he was employed by the Saltair Beach road, appeared at the station with a grip like a vise on the collar of Henry Wise, a painter and paperhanger, whom he accused of having robbed him of $50 in gold.

Kellogg said that he had drawn $50 from the bank during the afternoon to send his boy to the east to be educated. He said that he had been drinking in Commercial street saloons, when Wise appeared, and offered to conduct him to a respectable house.

Kellogg insisted that Wise had robbed him, and asked that Wise be booked. At this time a search was made, and a small amount of gold was found in a pocket of a suit which was hanging in a closet.

It was decided to book Wise on a charge of robbery, and to hold Kellogg as a witness. Police Sergeant John Hempel began to search Kellogg, and before he had reached the gold in his pocket.

Wise was vindicated and was immediately released. His money was returned to him, and he was congratulated on his escape from the necessity of facing an ugly charge.

AUSTRALIANS WILL IRRIGATE

Antipodeans Study American Methods for Reclaiming Arid Lands.

HAVE DIFFICULT PROBLEMS

J. C. O'Donnell of Bathurst, near Burko, Australia, is a big, broad-shouldered specimen of the type of British colonist that has won the island continent from the rule of the savage and has carved out an empire for white men.

"Australia is beginning to follow in the footsteps of the United States in the matter of irrigation for the reclamation of arid lands," he said last night. "Our land is not so arid and dead in appearance as some of that which is traveled between California and Utah, and its cooperation."

There are a number of eminent American engineers in Australia at this time, handling big irrigation projects such as your government is putting in. The extremely level character of our land gives the Australian engineer many very difficult problems to solve.

We have been compelled in the past to depend solely upon the rainfall for our pasturage. When we have had a drought we have suffered, and our stock has died. A general system of irrigation will give us a more stable prosperity.

Bushmen Dying Out. "Australia is rapidly becoming Anglicized. The aboriginal bushmen are fast dying out. They are ignorant, slothful and unreliable. The government has treated them well, giving them arms and tools. They allow their farms to grow up in weeds, and their tools to rust. They are nomadic and wandering, quite alien to your own North American Indians.

Miss Cora E. Spencer of Kansas City, editor of the Central Christian Advocate, will be one of the speakers during the conference.

HERE'S A THIRTEEN PUZZLE

What Will Happen to This Boating Party That Left With Unlucky Number?

There will be a great deal of interest manifested in a party which set sail yesterday at high noon for Salt Lake Island. The entire party, including the boat crew, numbered thirteen souls, a small poode held in the arms of one woman. The plans are to camp for two days on the island, and the employees around Saltair are laying bets that there'll be some "thing doing" in the way of hook-doors. If there is anything to hook-doors, the spell it will be the small dog of the variety known as "window washer," whose personality would bring the number to fourteen.
